Mitigation enabling energy transition in the Mediterranean region
A project by MEDENER and RCREEE funded by the European Union

SAVE THE DATE

The Mediterranean Association of National Agencies for Energy Management (MEDENER) in close cooperation with the Jordanian National Energy Research Center (NERC), invite you to participate in the

6th MEDENER International Conference on energy transition in the Euro-Mediterranean region

Energy efficiency and energy prices: a peaceful solution to the jigsaw

04 October 2018

Venue TBD, Amman, Jordan

The conference is organized in the framework of the project Mitigation enabling energy transition in the Mediterranean region (MEETMED Project), which is funded by the European Commission and implemented jointly by MEDENER and the Regional Centre for Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency (RCREEE).

Despite appropriate efforts deployed both in terms of innovative technologies and legislative and regulatory frameworks enabling it, some analysts recognise that the untapped potential for energy efficiency remains huge (World Energy Outlook 2017).

Price remains the inflexible attribute in making an energy choice. On the one hand, in most European Union Member States, household energy prices are greatly influenced by taxation and network charges, which usually make up more than a half of the total energy bill. On the other hand, in many countries of the southern shore of the Mediterranean, energy prices are strongly supported by the state. Nevertheless, distribution and sales companies complain about a significant amount of unpaid bills every year.

How should the lack of an efficient energy market affect the design of energy efficiency policies and their implementation? What are the consequences of an inefficient energy market on the end users' behavior?

The 6th MEDENER International Conference aims to set a dialogue between energy experts and practitioners to answer such questions with a special focus on energy prices constraint.
